SATURDAY, JUNE 10, 1871.

THE STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE of the Republican party of Pennsylvania will meet at the Logan House, Altoona, on Wednesday, June 21, at 12 M. A full attendance is requested, as business of importance will be transacted.

Republican newspapers please copy.

THE REPUBLICAN NOMINATIONS.

The future welfare, if not the very existence, of the Republican party in this city will depend upon the character of the nominations made by the conventions which will meet next Wednesday. Never in the history of the party has there been a greater necessity than at present that its best men should be nominated for offices of trust and responsibility, and never has there been a greater necessity that those who believe the downfall of the Republican party would be attended with disaster to the country should exert themselves to prevent the corrupt politicians who trade upon the party name from obtaining places upon its ticket. A desperate effort is now being made by men who are notoriously corrupt, and who have before now brought the Republican party into discredit, to obtain the nominations on next Wednesday, and it is even hinted that the whole affair is set up, and that the ticket to be offered to the Republican voters of Philadelphia next October is as good as fixed. The advocates of reform are sneered at, and an attempt is being made to bully them into silence by raising a clamor about the importance of supporting the principles of the party, and by intimations that they are fighting the battles of the Democracy. This sort of thing may deceive some persons, but there are independent voters in this city who are not to be deceived, and who are not to be bullied into voting for a ticket composed of notorious scamps if they have a fair chance to cast their ballots for reasonably honest men. It may be set down as a sure thing, that if the Democrats make good nominations, and the Republicans present a ticket containing the names of the men who are now most eagerly aspiring for the offices to be filled at the next election, the Republican party will receive a crushing defeat next October, and will deserve the responsibility for such a disaster, if it occurs, cannot be placed upon the shoulders of the advocates of reform, but upon those of the selfish political intriguers who were willing to risk the welfare of the party in the hope of promoting their own private ends. The only reason why the Republican party is not as strong now in Philadelphia as it was five years ago, is that these men have been permitted to control it, and unless the power they now hold is taken from them, another year will probably witness a complete disorganization of the party just upon the eve of an important Presidential campaign. The stake now at issue is an honest and capable administration of important municipal offices, and it may be considered as certain that the majority of votes will be cast for the candidates who will be most likely to fill the offices in question with credit to themselves and with satisfaction to the public, without regard to the political organization they may profess to belong to. There is a determination to have a reform in the administration of our municipal affairs that had best be respected by the professional wire-pullers; for those who created the Republican party, and who have given it all its character and influence, are heartily tired of having scalawags thrust into important public offices under the plea of party necessity, and are determined to support good men in the future, whether they profess to be Republicans or not. For our part, we intend to pursue in the future the same course we have in the past; and after the nominations are made on Wednesday we intend to give the record of each individual on the ticket a thorough ventilation, without fear, favor, or partiality. If the nominees are able to stand this, so much the better for them and for the party; but if they are not, they themselves and those who seek to thrust them on unwilling voters will alone be to blame. It is sincerely to be hoped that the warnings already given will be sufficient to cause a wise course to be pursued by the conventions, and that such a ticket will be presented as cannot be assailed. If this is done, a Republican victory will be assured; but if it is not done, defeat will be certain.

THE NEW DEPARTURE.

The action of the Democratic State Conventions of Pennsylvania, Ohio, and several other States, in passing resolutions deprecating revolutionary opposition to the new constitutional amendments, and acknowledging their validity until they are abrogated either by a decision of the Supreme Court or by a new series of constitutional amendments, has attracted much attention, and provoked much varied comment. The motives which induced the adoption of these resolutions are very evident. They were manifestly prompted by a conviction that the available party strength might be increased through the demolition of some of the old planks of an old platform. Vallandigham, Cassidy, Wallace, and their lieutenants have made up their minds that all the voters that can be gained by professions of opposition to negro suffrage, civil rights, etc., have already united their fortunes with the Democracy, and that the next grand object to be aimed at is to obtain further accessions from those Republicans who favored the amendments and who are disposed to resist their abrogation or repeal. The new departure is simply a shrewd piece of party tactics—only this and nothing more. It means that anxiety to win is exercising a more powerful influence in the Democratic councils than devotion to principles heretofore held to be vital; that a horde of hungry office-seekers are tired of butting their heads against a stone wall; that they are still ready to strike down the negro and to raise up the Rebels, if they get a good chance; but that they do not intend to sacrifice their opportunities for regaining power by persistence in antagonism to the declared will of the nation. Party platforms are deceptive and delusive at best; they have often been made to serve mere temporary purposes; they are often disregarded by candidates accepting them, after they become officials; their importance is frequently exaggerated; and they indicate rather what species of promises are deemed, by a conclave of politicians, to be most likely to insure a victory, than what the course of the party issuing them will be after it obtains power. It is true that they materially assist the public in forming a judgment of the probable course of the different organizations, but they are never absolutely binding and authoritative. After an election they are construed to mean much or little, to be obligatory or void, by various commentators; and all the uncertainties with which they have been hitherto involved are intensified in the new departure. Nobody knows, even now, exactly what it means. Even Jeff Davis avows his readiness to accept the situation, but he scarcely attempts to conceal from his audience that his only reason for such acceptance is his sheer inability to raise new armies to fight against the United States, to issue new Confederate notes receivable for arms and munitions of war, and to starve Union soldiers at Belle Isle and Andersonville. Andy Johnson, on the other hand, would not raise a rebellious army if he could, to combat the amendments by armed force, but he proposes to make three-hour speeches against them to all patient and long-suffering audiences that can be collected at any convenient period during the remainder of his existence. The minority of the Pennsylvania and Ohio Democratic Conventions which voted against the new departure have neither surrendered the right nor the disposition to continue their agitation against the amendments by any methods that they consider available and advantageous. It is only a few of the more unscrupulous and more enlightened of the Democratic captains who clearly discover the necessity of casting overboard, as dead weight, what the mass of their crew have been hitherto taught to regard as the precious portion of their cargo—as the portion, indeed, which formed the principal excuse for the continued existence of the ship of Democracy. Resolutions passed under these circumstances derive their chief importance from their probable effect on voters. They suggest speculation as to whether men hitherto acting with the Republicans can or cannot be enticed, by them, into the Democratic ranks; but they furnish no guarantee whatever that a succession of overwhelming Democratic victories would not lead to an evasion and virtual abrogation of the constitutional amendments.

CITIZENS WITHOUT DISTINCTION OF PARTY, opposed to the domination of bad men in the Legislature, City Councils, and other places. All who detect ignorance, fraud, and corruption. All who are willing to dedicate themselves to true Reform, are invited to aid in the demonstration to-night at the Academy of Music. Come! Combine and cooperate.

We have received a copy of the Wilmington (Del.) Directory, published by Messrs. Jenkins & Atkinson, proprietors of the City Commercial of that city. The Directory is a model of completeness and good workmanship. The typography, paper, and binding are all excellent, and equal to the best work done in the larger cities. We are not surprised to learn that this enterprising firm, the publishers of the only daily paper in Delaware, and a Republican one at that, has monopolized a large share of the printing business in and around Wilmington. The book will be found of much importance to our merchants, for the two cities are closely connected in many business ways. Copies will be sent by mail at $2 each.

Naval Orders.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Commander John Quackenbush is ordered to command U. S. S. South Atlantic Squadron, on the 24th inst. Lieutenant-Commander James O. Kane is detached from command of the Wasp and ordered to return home. Lieutenant-Commander Charles F. Schmitt, detached from the Naval Station at Mount City, Ill., and ordered to special ordnance duty at Pittsburg, Pa. Lieutenant-Commander Joseph D. Mack is ordered to special ordnance duty in Europe and ordered to return home. Lieutenant Francis H. Grove, from special ordnance duty at Pittsburg and placed on torpedo duty.

Coast Survey Service.

The iron coast survey steamer now being built at Wilmington, Del., will sail for the Pacific Coast about the 1st of September. Professors Agassiz and Hill, of Cambridge, will make a voyage on this vessel for the purpose of taking deep sea soundings all the way along the route, and will make collections of specimens of natural history for Cambridge University. The enterprise is highly thought of here, as it is believed it will add much information and value to the important stores of the Coast Survey service. The Secretary of the Treasury has written to the Secretaries of State and Navy asking that the naval and diplomatic officers may be instructed to afford facilities to the exploring party.

Revenue Assessors Dismissed.

The services of three hundred and sixteen Assistant Assessors of Internal Revenue were dispensed with since January 1st, and a further reduction of one hundred and fifty is estimated during the present month. At a late estimate, the reduction already made will effect a saving in assessing the revenue of over $1,000,000.

Receipts of Fractional Currency.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Case Dismissed.

NEW YORK, June 10.—Charles E. Hayward, sailor, of the ship Dexter, of Boston, was brought before Judge Van Susteren this morning charged with the murder of John McGee on the high seas, May 18. The evidence was that deceased first struck the prisoner with a having-pipe on the head and offered to repeat the blow, when the prisoner stabbed him. The Commissioner held that the prisoner acted in self-defense, and discharged him.
